Recycling - Pens & Medicine Packets

Upton resident Phillipa Thornton has kindly offered to collect both old pens and pill blister packets, so they can be recycled and avoid going off to landfill. She lives at Melvern, Main Street, Upton close to the Askham turning and will leave out two boxes in her porch for any items to be dropped off.

Plants for Pollinators:

March - Dandelion and Aubretia

You may well be asking why does dandelions, this humble garden perennial weed, gets a mention. Whilst not advocating growing dandelions deliberately, if they can be left to flower in some corner of your garden or lawn they provide an important food source. At this time of the year, when honeybee colonies are needing pollen and nectar to rebuild the colony numbers, dandelions provide both in abundance.

Dandelions have acquired many common names over the years such as faceclock, milk witch and cankerwort. The flower petals make a splendid wine and are used in the traditional dandelion and burdock soft drink, whilst roast dandelion roots can be used as a coffee substitute.

Their deep tap root brings up nutrients and adds nitrogen and minerals to soils at a shallower level. So spare a thought for the much maligned dandelion as there is much more to it than meets the eye.

Aubretia is a small compact herbaceous perennial with trailing stems of pink to mauve flowers. Although not native to the British Isles, it is commonly grown in our gardens and indeed worldwide as an ornamental plant.

With still very few forage plants in flower this month, it is particularly valuable for all early bees, including honey bees, and is attractive to butterflies too.

Aubretia belongs to the cabbage family, in which we find many other bee friendly members such as oilseed rape and broccoli. Aubretia may be grown as ground cover, in the crevices of a wall.

Puzzle Corner

Four playing cards, one of each suit, lie face down on a table. They are a three, a four, a five, and a six.

- The cards on either side of the four are black.
- The club is to the right of the three but not next to it.
- The spade is to the left of the heart.
- The middle two cards add up to an even number. Neither of them is a club.

Can you determine the cards' suits and their order?
